Behaviour-Based Safety Management

Foster a Proactive Health & Safety Mindset

Promote positive organisational change and make health and safety an integral part of everyday operations.

Many organisations struggle to effectively engage employees in health and safety. Implementing a behaviour-based safety program across your entire workforce promotes active engagement in health and safety that goes beyond compliance.

Start by implementing regular safety conversations that actively encourage the reporting of leading indicators such as safe and unsafe observations and behaviours. Equip your managers and leaders with the necessary support, guidance and tools to facilitate those safety conversations effectively.

Expected Outcomes

Drive Positive Behaviours

Make it easy for everyone to get involved in health and safety.

Empower your People

Provide easy to use tools so your people can report on anything.

Ensure Engagement

Schedule regular leadership tours around your sites and encourage safety conversations. Proactively encourage your people to report any observations and behaviours.

Continuously Improve

Benchmark performance, analyse reports and identify areas to target for improvement. Take action to show that you are listening.

How Does It Work?

02

Involve leadership

Direct your leadership team to regularly conduct leadership tours and record their findings to demonstrate a commitment to safety. Automatic reminders prompt activities.

03

Follow up on actions quickly

Ensure actions from any observations are tracked and followed up on quickly to show that you are listening.
